

JamJam and her best friend, Waffles

Everyone Loves a JamJam!

JamJam is a 17-year-old Newfoundland Pony (Registration # 632) who lives in Seal Cove in Conception Bay South, NL. Her proud owner, Dominique Lavers, has had her for nine years and says that before she got JamJam, she had two foals; Barney and Bam Bam (of course) both of whom live in the Deer Lake region.

Dominique says, "JamJam was my first Newfoundland Pony and I loved the breed from the start. I also have a quarter horse named Butter, so I guess you can say that I own Butter and Jam!"

She uses 'Jam' with the cart in the summer and hitches her to a sleigh in the winter. She says that JamJam was only halter broke when she got her in 2011, so she had to do all her own training to get her ready for the cart and sleigh. Newfoundland Ponies are known for both their intelligence and trustworthy nature, so it was no surprise when JamJam learned to handle both quickly and easily.

Like all ponies, Dominique says that Jam loves getting treats and that she spent most of the Newfoundland winter which saw a record snowfall, out rolling in fresh snow. JamJam is not alone. She lives with her best friend, Waffles who is part Newfoundland Pony.

If you want to help Newfoundland Ponies, learn more about the breed, or give access to pasture land for summer grazing, please contact the NPS rehoming committee at: membership@newfoundlandpony.com or atlarge1@newfoundlandpony.com.
